

Experiences of Learners at university: a Europe wide study

An invitation to participate in some important research

We need your help. We are part of a team studying the experiences of students at university and the factors which promote success. We are looking for people willing to share their stories of being at university, how they got there and experiences of their journey. This could include formal teaching as well as the more informal aspects of university life.

We are interested in listening to a range of learners, such as:

- the first in your family to go to university
- older learners or those from the local area
- those caring for children or others while studying
- students from a minority background
- students from another country altogether
- those who have done an Access programme
- learners who may have dropped out but have now returned to study

All interviews are done in strict confidence.

We are looking for volunteers who are in the first year of a programme or their final year.

Yes, I am interested in participating in your study: Name

Address and phone number:

Email address:

Please contact jayne.lawson@kent.ac.uk or contact Linden West or Mehri Holliday on Linden.west@canterbury.ac.uk and or mehri.holliday@canterbury.ac.uk

Many thanks for giving this attention and we look forward to hear from you.